

SPIDER-WOMAN

It's been a pretty roller-coaster couple of months for Jessica Drew. She decided to have a baby and took some time off of crimefighting to raise the little tyke.

She trained the former-super-villian-turned-protégé The Porcupine (A.K.A. Roger Gocking) to keep the streets of New York safe in her stead, but he's also pitching in around the house and has changed a diaper or two. Daily Bugle reporter Ben Urich has helped out as well.

Though Jessica's tried to keep herself at a distance from super heroics, trouble's had a way of catching up with her. In the past few weeks she's saved a bunch of aliens being held hostage in the center of a black hole, stopped an interdimensional terrorist from stealing a bunch of Marvel Universe Tech, and babyproofed her entire home.

Seriously, it was tougher than it looks.

Note: This issue takes place after SPIDER-WOMEN: OMEGA #1. Go read it, Marvelites!
