

Rosa,
why the hell
did I let you talk me into this?!

So much
hot air, Martha.

Look out for that comet!

This place is all wrong. We need to get out of here.

Rosa, why are the healing pools red? I don't like this at all.

And I'm roasting.

OMIGOD!

Thaaaaa
diiiiii: htaaaa:
baaaaa!

Elias, it's that mask. I don't understand!

Everything's fine, ladies. It's all part of the healing ceremony.

Your mother gave me that mask because I'm the keeper of all her secrets.

But why does she have any secrets?

Look at them!
Their infections
are out of control--
they're rotting!

We have to help!

Difficult
once the rot sets in.

Look out!
Into the pool,
quickly!

CRASH

SMASH

It's not safe here either.

Mum?! Where's Martha and Elias?

They're coming for us, Rosa--run!

What are we running from?

You tell me--it's your dream!

Quick, this way!

We're in a heart--Mai's heart? I couldn't save her, Mum, and now Lewis hates me.

He can see that your ego got the better of you.

Down here, now!

Rosa, you know most of us doctors are deontologists.

We follow rules and respect the dignity of individual patients.

So, what the hell has happened to you? The way you're behaving, working with criminals, letting people die--

--you're becoming a consequentialist.

The end justifies the means.

Caring about the masses, seeing past the individual. Is that so bad?

You're going against the grain of what a doctor is, Rosa. Be careful.

As a consequentialist, morally you can do anything if it's for the greater good.

It means you can even justify killing me--

--and then harvesting my organs, if that action will save five other lives.

Mum, no! Stop!

Doing bad things to get a good result is a brutal philosophy, Rosa.

Mum, please!

Don't worry. I'm dead already, remember?

Make sure you can live with the consequences.

I know what I'm doing.

Do you?

Mum, no--come back!

Mai was going to die. I had to try something. If Hippocrates hadn't interrupted, she might have lived.