Squirrel Girl @unbeatableg
@starkmantony Hey Tony!! You don't have a secret identity--do you think that's something other super heroes should try? Seems easier tbh

Tony Stark @starkmantony
@unbeatableg No. Obviously I am too important a person to have done that. It must have been my secretary, who sent it by accident.

Squirrel Girl @unbeatableg
@starkmantony your secretary, who handles chatting online for you. who reads your messages and then takes your dictated responses.

Tony Stark @starkmantony
@unbeatableg Tell her yes, Jarvis, and let's leave it there. Stop typing, Jarvis. There's no reason for you to be typing. Jarvis.

Months ago...

(i.e., after Squirrel Girl #8, but BEFORE Squirrel Girl #1!) (Comics, everybody!)

Oh, and if it strikes terror into the cowardly and superstitious hearts of criminals, all the better! So to summarize: practical, cute, reduces criminals to a state of quivering and abject terror, useful pockets and/or belt. Got it, Chip?

Is this...do you do this in every issue? Does Marvel pay more for these?

I'm gonna keep this costume around too--Mom'd kill me if I didn't--but it'll be sweet to mix it up, you know? Who says super heroes can't have more than one costume?

No one. Spider-Man has several. Iron Man too.

Wait, didn't both those guys end up with their alternate costumes coming to life and turning into bad guys?

Okay, yes, but the difference is we'll make my costume out of regular Fabric instead of "this weird space alien I found" or "hyperintelligent AI with some Ultron inside of it, lol."

Tony Stark doesn't actually say "lol."

Man, he probably does.

Easy... easy...

No need for anyone to notice I'm here...

IF you want to know more about Howard the Duck, I convinced Marvel to publish a comic all about him for the past year, all leading up to this one issue. You're welcome, Chip. Oh, and after this crossover we'll no longer need your services, Chip.

All I ask is that you remember to call me when Marvel reboots everything again in six months.
