The island-nation of Krakoa.

Sounds fancy, but for me, it was just a prison.

Now it's a ghost town.

But it's guarded by these Sentinels.

Luckily, this is an Orchis ship. Allows us to use their own tech to travel cloaked, float right by them.

I need something those mutants left behind on Krakoa.

Still not used to seeing this place from above ground after spending so much time trapped underneath it in the Pit.

Poor you.

You can hear what I'm thinking?

Even in this sorry state, I'm one of the most powerful psychics there is.

Humble too.

What the hell is this? Am I supposed to climb or dig?

You're supposed to be quiet and let me work.

RUMBLE

Would ya look at that?

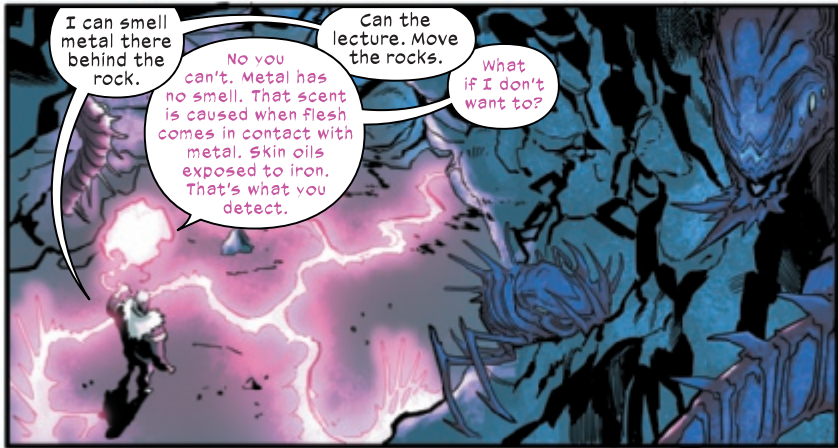

You didn't tell the others what we're searching for.

They only need to know who to attack when I give the order.

Top dog, alpha male.

That's me.

I can smell metal there behind the rock.

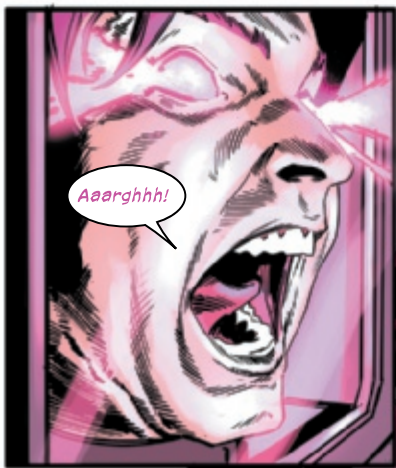

No you can't. Metal has no smell. That scent is caused when flesh comes in contact with metal. Skin oils exposed to iron. That's what you detect.

Can the lecture. Move the rocks.

What if I don't want to?

As long as I got your head in here, you don't have a choice.

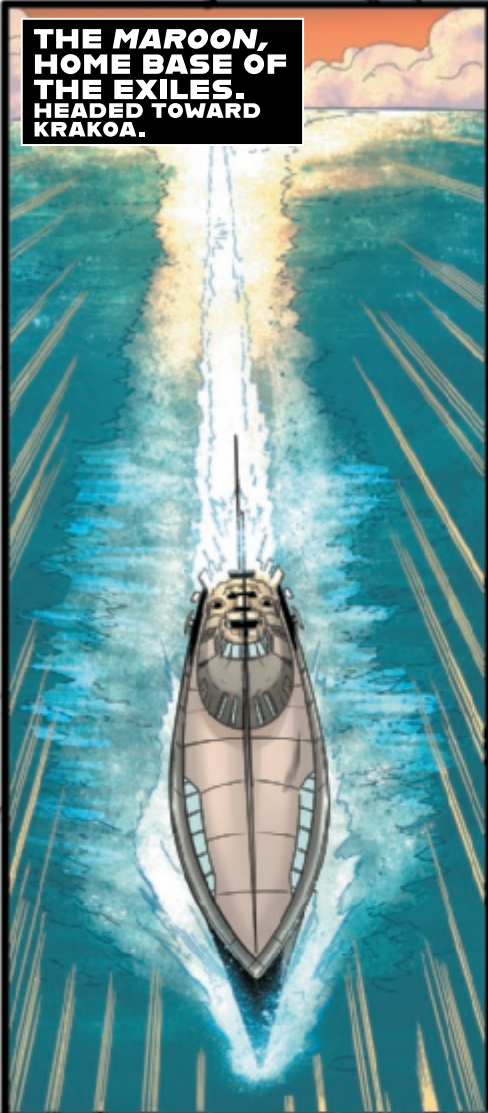

Aaarghhh!

Okay, I get it. You're the boss.

THE MAROON, HOME BASE OF
THE EXILES.
HEADED TOWARD KRAKOA.

We shouldn't have brought the kids.

They'd be more afraid if we left them somewhere else, Nekra.

They wouldn't believe we'd come back for them.

But now our fate is their fate. If Sabretooth brings the fight on board, they'll all be at risk. He won't hesitate to slaughter children.

So we don't let him board, Toad. We cut him down wherever we find him.

You sound angrier than me, Oya. I didn't think that was possible.

After what he did to Quentin, it's very possible.
