Traditionally, there were several ways that a person could become a werewolf. In her book Giants, Monsters, and Dragons, folklorist Carol Rose said, "In ancient Greece it was believed that a person could be transformed by eating the meat of a wolf that had been mixed with that of a human and that the condition was irreversible." Centuries later other methods were said to create werewolves, including, "being cursed, or by being conceived under a full moon, or by having eaten certain herbs, or by sleeping under the full moon on a Friday, or by drinking water that has been touched by a wolf."

It was also widely believed that werewolves could dress in a special, protective wolf skin, though they had to remove it at daybreak and hide it. If their magical pelt was found and taken from the werewolf while in human form, he or she could be killed.

I don't need the whole history.

Just the precedents. In 1589, a German named Peter Stubbe claimed to own a belt of wolfskin that allowed him to change into a wolf. His body would bend into a lycan form, his teeth would multiply in his mouth, and he craved human blood.

We are fine.

Poor thing, really.

Get the window fixed and keep shearing him. The pelts made from his skin have worked well on the men in town.
They've really taken to hunting.
The beast is a godsend, let's keep getting what we can from him.

GAIA,
MY LORD.

I WILL FIND HER.
